

Board Game Friends hits Kickstarter: A mobile app to bring players together.

Why spend so much time finding other players or events when it is possible to have a single app made for everyone?

Designed by two seasoned players, Board Game Friends aims to bridge the gap that the board game community has in terms of organizing game gatherings, whether in bars or private homes.

This new community platform offers a comprehensive range of functions: from finding players and events to synchronizing your calendar with your friends looking for available spots. Users will be able to search by choosing their suitable events on a map or swiping event cards. Players can also express their preferences to connect with others who share similar board game interests. Additionally, people can receive personalized notifications to stay updated on any upcoming events that would take a specific board game to the table.

Another useful option is to let people know if they should be familiar with the rules before attending an event. Most people enjoy teaching but occasionally time is limited, so users can select the option that fits their schedule. On the other hand, Board Game Friends provides many options to create an event, even if a person wants to play a game they don't own.

The designers explain that they have tested this app and they are confident it will leave behind the frustration of looking for players to start a campaign or finding a suitable place to play, which is normally done through different webpages and apps that are not specifically created to meet the expectations of board games players.

Board Game Friends can be used on both Android and iOS mobile devices. Once developed, the app will be released in North America, Europe, Australia and New Zealand, and users will be able to download it and use it for free.

The designers are running a Kickstarter campaign, looking for the support of the community to develop this project.
